

Once upon a time there was a little boy named Caleb he had a dog called Charlie who was very good. Charlie would never bite and would always be clean and tidy. Charlie and Caleb had no money and no home so they had to live outside on the streets. One day they were in search of food when they met some builders who were very messy. They asked the builders if they could build them a house. These builders just laughed at them. Charlie and Caleb walked away very sad they had no money, no friends, no food and no house and now people were laughing at them. The next day Charlie and Caleb went to the builders again. This time they offered to help clean up their mess in exchange for the builders building them a house. They saw a certain way. It was a complete surprise to both
